SLAVERY IN HAWAII .- Nothing in current history is more shocking than the story of female slavery in the Sandwich islands. That the abominable practice of buying and selling white girls exists there seems to be clearly proved by the statements of H. Lange, the commissioner for Norweglan immigrants in Hawaii. A native of Finland bought a girl for seventy-five dollars. A negro and a Norwegian, long residents of the island, purchased each a girl on condition to work the three years agreed npon. Another man whose name is given, sold his servant to a missionary! A plantation overseer fell in love with the girl and proposed to her employer—really her owner—to buy her. The sum of $100 was demanded. The alleged lover demurred and offered a smaller sum, and after considerable wrangling the bargain was closed for seventy-two dollars and fifty cents, the sel-ler insuring the buyer that the girl was sound and a good worker. The traffic in human chattels is engaged in and encouraged by the large planters, who rule the islands, the kings, the ministers and judges being all under their sway. Mr. Lange very properly requests his government to forbid any more immigration to Hawaii. This beastly business is carried on in the country whose nominal sovereign was not long ago received with regal honors at Windsor palace and in several capitals on the continent.—San Francisco Chronicle.
